

Thumbs Up: Mass transit moving forward

by NUVO Editors

click to enlarge

Dare we say, it? Mayor Ballard, we are impressed that you made it your first order of business to outline mass transportation issues and strategy. You understand that resurrecting the state's great interurban rail network, or something like it, is essential to the fiscal, environmental and sustainable success of our city, state and region. The country and world also must face up to the reality and the expense, as well. Cooperation is key — among all players, from the City-County Council to the Statehouse. We'll be watching and rooting for positive solutions to the very real problems we face regarding transportation and infrastructure. Your administration was innovative in its response to the overwhelming problems of combined sewer overflow. Now it's time to work your magic elsewhere.

Tags: Current Events, transportation, Greg Ballard, elections, Opinion

AUTHOR ARCHIVES

Election Day Fast Facts for Marion County

Marion County Clerk Beth White's Office answers burning Election Day questions such as "How many polls locations do we have?"

by NUVO Editors

2011 Indianapolis Election Results

NUVO pulls these numbers straight from the Marion County Election Board as soon as they are ready: freshly baked data for your digesting pleasure. May the best win!

by NUVO Editors

More »