I'm a huge proponent of mass transit, and my votes in the recent municipal elections went to candidates who support it. However, the current proposal is disappointing (Transit plan: A new push," Dec. 13). Is Perry Township a part of Indianapolis or not? It's got fewer miles of bus route than Franklin Township, despite being more densely populated. I'm sure it has as many people who need or want public transportation.

As a former Southside resident, I can say that the Southside is underserved with parks and library branches. Must it also get less bus service? I understand the need to include only those counties where there is support for mass transit. But the plan must serve all of Marion County.
