Greenwood has a message to state lawmakers: let our residents vote on paying more in taxes for mass transit.

The Greenwood City Council voted 6-1 to ask the state legislature to allow central Indiana counties to have referendums on a public transportation plan.

Residents should decide themselves whether they want to pay for the Indy Connect proposal for more bus service and new rail lines, council members said.

Council members Ron Bates, Brent Corey, Ron Deer, Linda Gibson, Monica Magna and Tim McLaughlin voted to give final approval to the endorsement of a referendum.
